

It is my feeling that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. The Indiana no-call list has reduced the number of unsolicited telemarketing calls by a large amount. Our house used to recieve up to 10 calls a day, most during the evening hours, and some as late as 9:30pm. Often times these operators are rude and will not take no for an answer. They would not take our nubmer off thier calling lists even after we asked them to. The Indiana law has reduced the number of calls to only a few calls per week. I hope that our government does not give in to the special interests and lessen the effectiveness of the no-call list. Please do not allow the telemarketing reign of terror return. Thank you, Brian D. Miller
